

SHOW US WHAT YOU THINK! The Praxis Lab invites you to participate in a photovoice research study that centers your thoughts on colorblind racism through photography and dialogue.

ARE YOU ELIGIBLE?

To be eligible you must be a student therapist-in-training, that is currently seeing clients under supervision, and have access to secure internet for virtual meetings.

WHAT WILL YOU DO?

Over an 8-week period, you will take photos and engage in an experiential learning and research project, that blends journaling and focus groups to share and discuss your photos.

COMPENSATION

Participants can receive a $45 Visa giftcard, for participating

Confronting colorblindness in mental health through photovoice

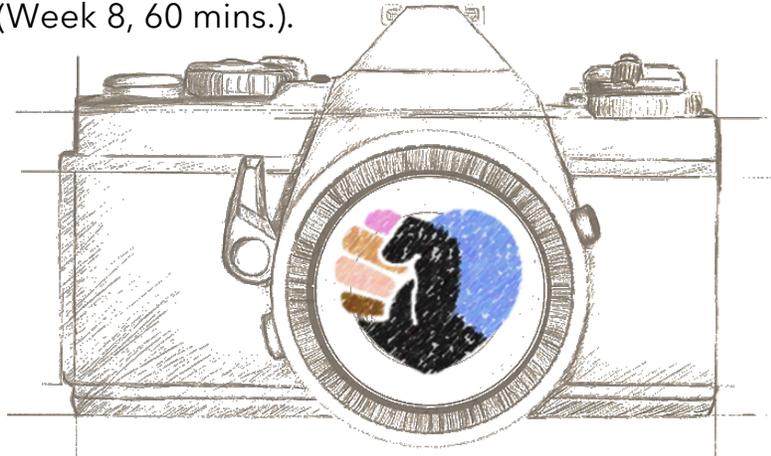

Principal Investigator: Lorien S. Jordan, PhD., LMFT

This project aims to understand if photovoice, a participatory research method, can be used as an experiential learning activity to assist therapist-trainees critically reflect on colorblind racism.

We are looking for therapists-in-training*, who are interested in issues of social (in)justice to participate in this 8-week study.

Each week, participants will be asked to take photographs that illustrate their thoughts, experiences, and feelings in response to prompts provided by the research team. During the 8-week period, you will:

- Be assigned to a group (of 6 participants), and meet for an introductory session (30-45 mins), where we will briefly discuss photovoice, colorblind racism, and the weeks ahead (Week 1, 30 mins.);
- Work as a group via Zoom (90-120 mins each session) to develop ideas and discuss the feelings, challenges, and meanings of your selected photos (Weeks 3,5,7);
- Upload your photos to a secure and individual Slack page, and write a short narrative about the photo (Weeks 2, 4, 6);
- Meet for a final individual interview to discuss your experiences in the group (Week 8, 60 mins.).

*If you decide to participate, your participation is completely voluntary, and you can leave the study at any time without any penalty to you.
